Q. With your transition to the bullpen, every step has been something new. For you to have to get ready so quickly but then to come out, execute your pitches, just how big was that for you personally?

ROKI SASAKI: I feel like this time around, I did get enough warm-up pitches to be able to make sure that I can execute. So I felt actually okay.

Q. You guys now head back to Los Angeles being up in this series, 2-0. Of course, it's a five-game series, a shorter one. Considering that, what's the feeling amongst the group, for yourself, just as you guys head back home to Los Angeles to hopefully put yourself in a position to close this series?

ROKI SASAKI: The starting pitching is doing an amazing job results-wise. And all I'm trying to do is hold the lead or finish a game.

Q. You've had off days within this series thus far, but do you feel like you're comfortable if you did have to go in a back-to-back outing?

ROKI SASAKI: I actually do feel pretty good about being able to throw back-to-back games. On my off day, I threw with pretty good intensity and felt pretty good.
