CADILLAC
CHAMPIONSHIP

Q. You talked about that you feel like you have some success on some longer golf courses, even though you may not be the longest player out here. Why do you think that is?

NICK TAYLOR: I think it almost helps mentally to be a little more patient with the difficulty, that par has value more so than other places. And I just feel like I'm just a little more patient, a little more free, that if I hit a wedge shot to 30 feet and make par it's not the end of the world. Where I feel like, in the shoot-out places, I might get on myself a little bit more. I feel the mid iron part of my game is probably the strength in my game, and I'm going to have a lot here. If I gain on some guys, that's my sweet spot. So driving the fairway is the first part here, but after that that part was pretty good too.
